Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from A Little Journey to Buffalo In the year Eighteen Hundred Twenty, the population of Buffalo was two thousand. In Eighteen Hundred Seventy-three, when I landed there and carried my carpetbag out to Cold Spring looking for my uncle, walking so as to save carfare, the population was two hundred thousand. However, I can truthfully lay claim to having increased the wealth of Buffalo not a little. This does not mean that I have attached myself permanently to any large rolls of currency. Nevertheless I can say in all sincerity that Buffalo has been good to me. In Eighteen Hundred Seventy-five I was working in a soap-factory on Seneca Street, in the district known as The Hydraulics.
