Excerpt: . . . he aspect of that dot U. S. contract, what it does, what it does not do. At this point, I want to extend a warm welcome to Assistant Secretary Nancy Victory in her first appearance before the subcommittee. We look forward to hearing from all of you today, as we continue to work with you on this issue and others. And I yield for an opening statement to my friend, Ranking Member Ed Markey. Mr. Markey. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Thank you for having this hearing. Welcome, Secretary Victory, to your first hearing before our subcommittee. The proposed dot kids domain will be a cyberspace sanctuary for content that is suitable for kids 13 and under, and will be an area devoid of content that is harmful to such minors. The harmful-to-minors standard was the standard that many public interest groups proposed as an antidote to the Telecommunications Act debate, while the problematic constitutional nature of the provision in that law addressing Internet pornography. Now that harmful-to-minors standard is obviously subject to court challenge currently, and we will have to see how the court rules in the future. Yet I want to emphasize a number of points about the free speech issues that have been raised about the current proposal that distinguish it from that debate. First, the proposed legislation that Mr. Shimkus has constructed will not subject all of the Internet communications to a harmful-to-minors standard. If you are in Tennessee or Timbuktu, you can publish or speak any content you want on the Internet. This proposal does not affect your ability to do so. This proposal now only addresses a...
