

From Slave to College President: The Life Story of Booker T. Washington (Paperback)

By G Holden Pike

BROWNSTONE BOOKS, United States, 2009. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 222 x 150 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Booker T. Washington (1856-1915) was an American educator, orator, author and leader of the African-American community. He was freed from slavery as a child, and after working at several menial jobs in West Virginia, earned his way through an education at Hampton Institute and Wayland Seminary. Upon recommendation of Hampton founder Sam Armstrong, as a young man, he was appointed as the first leader of the new Tuskegee Institute, then a teachers college for blacks. Washington believed that education was a crucial key to African American citizens rising within the social and economic structure of the United States. He rose into a nationally prominent role as spokesman and leader for them. Although his non-confrontational approach was criticized by some blacks (notably W.E.B. Du Bois who labeled Washington the Great Accommodator), he was successful in building relationships with major philanthropists such as Anna T. Jeanes, Henry Huddleston Rogers, Julius Rosenwald, and the Rockefeller family who contributed millions of dollars for education at Hampton, Tuskegee and helped pay for hundreds of public schools for black children in...
