Men are forbidden, in this kingdom, to grow tobacco on their lands. This, one would think, ought not to be. The cause is, that the excise duty on tobacco yields a great deal of money; and, if the tobacco were cultivated here, instead of being brought from abroad, it is evident that it would be impossible to collect an excise duty from it; because, being planted in every man s garden, and in every field, or corner of a field, those who use tobacco would provide themselves with it without paying duty; as, indeed, some men do now, in spite of the law. We have seen, in letter IT, that it was Cromwell, and his execrable villains, who first invented the.Ernst . We have seen that it was they who first made the people pay taxes on...
